

Dear Members of the Licensing, Occupations, and Administrative Regulations Committee,

As future physicians in the state of Kentucky, we are writing to express our strong support for the bipartisan Youth Mental Health Protection Act. This legislation seeks to prohibit state-licensed health professionals in Kentucky from engaging in “conversion therapy” with minors who may be Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, or Queer (LGBTQ). According to the American Psychological Association, “conversion therapy” techniques can include administering electric shocks, inducing vomiting while viewing homoerotic images, using shame to create aversion to same-sex attractions, and using hypnosis to try to redirect desires.

“Conversion therapy” is written in quotations because it is not therapy. LGBTQ identities cannot be “treated” just as heterosexual and cisgender identities cannot be “treated”; there is nothing pathological with any sexual orientation or gender identity. To date, there is no evidence that “conversion therapy” is successful at changing a person’s identity; instead, it directly causes psychological distress that often results in self-harm, suicidal ideation, and suicide completion. In our short time as student doctors, many of us have witnessed first-hand how lack of acceptance can cause LGBTQ youth lasting harm. We’ve worked with adolescents who were treated in the hospital after attempting suicide. We’ve listened to their painful stories of parental rejection and school bullying. We’ve been supportive and affirming, knowing our brief interactions cannot substitute for a parent’s unconditional love. We’ve despaired on their behalf, wishing our world were more accepting.

The medical literature supports our personal experiences. Peer-reviewed research has demonstrated that a shocking 60% of young adults who were subjected to “conversion therapy” as minors reported attempting suicide- a rate three times higher than LGBT youth who did not undergo “conversion therapy”. The rate of LGB youth suicide is already alarmingly high; according to the Trevor Project, LGB youth are about five times as likely as heterosexual youth to have attempted suicide. A study in JAMA Psychiatry found that transgender adults who were subjected to “conversion therapy” before age ten were four times more likely to report lifetime suicide attempts than the general transgender population, in which suicide is already a leading cause of death. These alarming rates of suicide are in part the result of the horrors these individuals experience at the hands of a profession entrusted to help. What greater rejection exists than “conversion therapy”, which, through torture and instructed self-hate, attempts to change who you are? If adopted, the Youth Mental Health Protection Act would literally be life-saving for Kentuckians.

Unsurprisingly, nearly every major health organization strongly opposes “conversion therapy”. Two such organizations are the Kentucky Medical Association and American Medical Association, of which many of us are proud members. These groups are composed of physicians who span the political spectrum, and their policy stances are the product of rigorous research, debate, and a democratic voting process. Despite the resolute opposition of physicians and allied health professionals, “conversion therapy” is frequently practiced. According to the UCLA Williams Institute, 350,000 LGBTQ Americans were subjected to “conversion therapy” as minors and 16,000 LGBTQ youth ages 13-17 will receive “conversion therapy” before they reach the age of 18. In Kentucky, we are aware of nearly 70 licensed practitioners engaging in “conversion therapy”. Given the broad rejection of “conversion therapy” by leading organizations, we would be remiss to permit this practice to continue in Kentucky. Kentucky’s youth deserve the very best, meaning practitioners who observe the highest standards of their profession. By continuing to allow the horrendous practice to take place in our Commonwealth, we signal to LGBTQ youth that their lives are not important enough to be protected by law.

While there remain challenges in building a Kentucky in which all youth feel accepted, passing the Youth Mental Health Protection Act is a significant step forward. In addition to communicating to youth that they belong in Kentucky, adopting this legislation will signal to mental health practitioners that their interventions must be adherent to evidence-based practices. Kentucky should join the 18 states that ban “conversion therapy” by state-licensed health professionals. The precious lives of our youth depend on your political courage and legislative action.

Sincerely,
279 Kentucky medical students
