Livestock, Poultry, and Fish

302 KAR 22:070. Restrictions on biological materials in Kentucky.

In response to questions by Co-Chair Hale, Dr. Stout stated that, in many cases, the department would be unaware of the transport of animals with communicable diseases; however, this administrative regulation established authority if the department were made aware of such a situation. Another state, for example, might contact the department to alert of such a transport. Mr. Quarles stated that the General Assembly expanded the department's authority over livestock, poultry, and fish as part of a greater review of functions of the Office of State Veterinarian. This administrative regulation gave Dr. Stout the authority to quarantine and surveil in situations regarding communicable diseases in livestock, poultry, and fish. The department's intent was to create an administrative regulation for each type of animal, eventually including one (1) for fish. Action regarding testing and surveillance of fish would be in conjunction with the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources because that department had the most regulatory authority in matters regarding fish. The Department of Agriculture did not currently have a framework for the phenotyping of small fish.

The current version of this administrative regulation was more subjective, and these changes provided clearer standards and consistency across Kentucky. Construction activities and some agricultural activities were exempt.

A motion was made and seconded to approve Sections 1 through 4 to comply with the drafting and formatting requirements of KRS Chapter 13A. Without objection, and with agreement of the agency, the amendments were approved.

Smaller fire departments would be able to report to the Kentucky Fire Commission, rather than to the Department for Local Government.

Co-Chair Hale stated that volunteer fire departments were integral to community safety. Without volunteer fire departments, some counties would have difficulty ensuring safety. It was getting difficult to find and retain volunteer firefighters. In response to a question by Co-Chair Hale, Mr. Kurtsinger stated that the commission was beginning firefighter youth programs in efforts to foster interest in youth regarding volunteer firefighting.

A motion was made and seconded to approve the following amendments: (1) to amend Sections 2 through 6 to comply with the drafting and formatting requirements of KRS Chapter 13A; and (2) to add material incorporated by reference.
