

1           A RESOLUTION honoring the University of Kentucky Women's Basketball Team,
2 2022 Southeastern Conference Tournament Champions.

3           WHEREAS, On March 6, 2022, before a raucous crowd of 7,997 at the Bridgestone
4 Arena in Nashville, Tennessee, the University of Kentucky Wildcats defeated the 5 Gamecocks of the University of South Carolina by a score of 64-62 to capture the 2022
6 Southeastern Conference Women's Basketball Championship; and

7           WHEREAS, the SEC Tournament championship marked the first for the Wildcats 8 since 1982 and erased a history of recent frustrations in the event, including runner-up 9 finishes in 2010, 2011, 2013, and 2014; and

10           WHEREAS, after an opening round win against Mississippi State, the Wildcats, the 11 seventh-seeded team in the tournament, completed their shocking run by knocking off the 12 top three seeds in the tournament, Louisiana State, Tennessee, and South Carolina, 13 becoming just the third team in SEC history, and the first since Vanderbilt in 2004, to win 14 the crown by winning four games on four consecutive days; and

15           WHEREAS, in the quarterfinals against LSU, which was ranked sixth in the nation,
16 the Wildcats, led by All-American Rhyne Howard's 32 points, blew out to a 20 point 17 halftime lead and defeated the Tigers 78-63; and

18           WHEREAS, in the semifinals, Kentucky faced Tennessee, ranked 18th nationally 19 and one of the most storied programs in the history of women's college basketball, and 20 led by Howard's 24 points, 9 rebounds, and 7 assists, cruised to an 83-74 win; and

21           WHEREAS, in the championship game against South Carolina, the top ranked team
22 in the entire nation and winners of six of the last seven SEC tournaments, the Wildcats 23 were behind by 12 points entering the 4th quarter and their prospects looked dim; and

24           WHEREAS, still trailing 62-53 with five minutes left in the game, the Wildcats 25 went on an unbelievable 11-0 run, capped off by Dre'una Edwards three-point shot with 26 five seconds left to shock the Gamecocks and clinch the title and an automatic berth to 27 the 2022 NCAA Tournament; and

1           WHEREAS, the Wildcats were led on the floor in the tournament, as they have 2           been all year, by senior All-American Rhyné Howard, who averaged 22 points a game
3           over the four games and was named the Most Valuable Player of the tournament; and

4           WHEREAS, Howard was joined on the All-Tournament Team by junior forward
5           Dre'una Edwards, who, in addition to hitting the game-winning basket, scored 27 points 6           and garnered 9 rebounds in the championship game; and

7           WHEREAS, the remarkable, amazing, and completely unexpected run to the 8           championship capped off one of the greatest in-season turnarounds in college basketball 9           history; and

10          WHEREAS, less than one month before the championship game, on February 10, 11          after a loss to South Carolina on the heels of a home loss in overtime to Texas A&M, the 12          Wildcats had an overall record of 9 wins and 11 losses, and just 2 wins in the SEC, and a 13          season in which the team started with just nine scholarship players looked like it was 14          going to be further derailed by injuries and other off-court issues; and

15          WHEREAS, instead, the Wildcats proceeded to win their last six regular season 16          games, and enter the NCAA Tournament as the hottest team in the country; and

17          WHEREAS, the Wildcats were coached to victory by Kentucky native Kyra Elzy, 18          who in two seasons has amassed a record of 37 wins against 20 losses, along with 19          assistant coaches Niya Butts, Amber Smith, and Gail Goestenkors; and

20          WHEREAS, the Wildcats team included Jada Walker, Robyn Benton, Jazmine
21          Massengill, Treasure Hunt, Olivia Owens, Emma King, Nyah Leveretter, and Blair
22          Green; and
