

1 A RESOLUTION adjourning the Senate in honor and loving memory of Bias
2 Sidney Tilford, Sr.

3 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. was born in 1933, the son of Bias Tilford, Sr.
4 and Ernestine Brock Tilford-Harris, whose example of commitment, hard work, pride, 5 and faith shaped his life; and

6 WHEREAS, equally formative in the life of Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr., was his aunt,
7 Sallie Ree Tilford, an educator who taught during segregation and desegregation in Scott 8 County and later in Washington, D.C. At a time when education itself was an act of 9 courage, her life demonstrated discipline, purpose, and resolve. An example that helped 10 inspire Bias's lifelong commitment to expanding opportunity for others; and

11 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. was born to carry forward a legacy rooted in 12 extraordinary courage. He was the great-great-great-great-grandson of Free Wyatt 13 Tilford, a man who refused to be enslaved. That same spirit defined Bias's life. He never 14 settled and he never allowed others to settle for less than they deserved; and

15 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. was raised in Georgetown's historic Boston
16 community and came of age during segregation, when opportunity for Black Kentuckians 17 was constrained not by ability, but by access; and

18 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. was a proud graduate of the historic Ed Davis
19 High School. Though he did not attend college, his education never ceased. He read 20 constantly, studied history deeply, and carried himself with the presence of a professor.
21 Many believe that if heaven grants honorary degrees, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. will surely 22 receive one; and

23 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. became a pioneer in audiovisual technology, 24 photography, and media at a time when the work demanded skill, trust, and constant 25 movement. He worked concurrently for IBM and WLEX-TV, performing true double 26 duty during an era when such roles required exceptional discipline; and

27 WHEREAS, with IBM, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. served as an audiovisual technician

9 Kentucky basketball and sports history; and

10 WHEREAS, during the Adolph Rupp coaching years and the early Joe B. Hall era, 11 the Tilford family was often summoned by the University of Kentucky's athletic 12 department to host recruits. Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. and his wife Barbara Tilford, opened 13 their home to early Black basketball recruits. They offered hospitality, guidance, and a 14 sense of belonging. That same generosity was extended at times to football recruits as 15 well. The Tilford home became a place of trust when such spaces were rare; and

16 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. made a lasting contribution to the Black press
17 as a photographer for the Louisville Defender, working out of its Bluegrass Lexington 18 office. His work helped preserve African American history and community voices during 19 a period when documentation itself was essential. His legacy is now permanently
20 recorded in a recently published book chronicling the history of the Louisville Defender;
21 and

22 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. was also a trusted political advisor and 23 photographer to former Speaker of the Kentucky House of Representatives, William 24 "Bill" Kenton. He provided counsel, strategy, and visual documentation during a 25 significant period in Kentucky political history; and

26 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr.'s influence extended into arts and culture. He

1 coordinator. He oversaw on-site operations, organized advertising and promotional 2 efforts, and managed media logistics, helping establish the foundation of a nationally 3 recognized festival; and

4 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. was a tireless advocate for economic 5 opportunities. He helped expand minority contract supplier opportunities through

8 focused on supporting minority entrepreneurs and expanding access to capital; and 9 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. was deeply rooted in the City of Georgetown.

10 He served on the Georgetown Planning Commission, the Georgetown City Council

13 Georgetown, where his legacy remains etched on its very walls; and

14 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr.'s commitment to civil rights and journalism is 15 recognized on the wall of fame at the Lyric Theatre in Lexington. Together, Bias and his

17 WHEREAS, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. was a devoted member of First Baptist 18 Church of Georgetown. He raised his family in faith and lived it through example rather 20 intended, offering discipline, encouragement, and love rooted in responsibility and grace; 21 and

22 WHEREAS, at family gatherings, Bias Sidney Tilford, Sr. was the heart of the
